

THE IDEA OF OPENING A CHILDREN'S SHELTER

The children's hut was opened by the Children of Africa Foundation, in order to offer orphaned or abandoned children all the benefits of a small family structure.

Situated in the very centre of Abidjan in the district of Plateau, the Children's hut has been welcoming for more than 20 years, abandoned children (girls and boys), orphans, children living in the street, and children coming from destitute families, without ethnic or religious distinction.

The shelter takes full charge of the children by providing them with food, lodging, supervision, schooling, training and health care. The primary focus of the shelter has been to give back their dignity to these children who have been tested by life from a very young age, by making sure they have every chance to integrate the society again and to reintegrate a family unit.

THE STORY OF THE SHELTER

The children's hut opened its doors in 1994 in Abidjan on the initiative of a group of friends who wanted to help street children. It was taken over in 1998 by the Children of Africa Foundation headed by Mrs. Dominique Ouattara, who became First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire in 2011.

The shelter takes care of 6 to 18 years young street children, orphans, abandoned children, or children involve in various forms of exploitation. At the beginning, there were only boys but in 2009, the shelter started welcoming girls. Now it has a capacity of 60 beds.

The Children's hut offers these children the opportunity to receive a good education, have access to numerous activities such as art, computer science, sports and so on in order to open their minds. Children also receive psychological assistance through listening sessions to help them regain self confidence. One of the objectives of the Center is to ensure that children reintegrate their families of origin. A three year follow-up program is set up to make sure the reintegration process is efficient. This social and academic support gives them the tools to move towards a better future.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING

All the children are enrolled in nearby schools. They are also supervised by educators to ensure that their schooling takes place in the best conditions and children follow the programs with keen interest.

In addition, the children's hut has an important vocational training and apprenticeship project which aims to provide the children with a skill once they leave the shelter. These are sewing and market gardening activities which are also reinforced with computer training.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SOCIAL LIFE

The children enjoy handcraft activities, fun excursions (zoo, swimming pool, craft center, etc.) and have the great pleasure of participating in summer camps by the sea. Some of them also participated successfully in nanbudo competitions, a Japanese martial art. One of the sportswomen has won several gold and silver medals in national and international competitions. From the library room to handicrafts activities and computer learning, the recreational activities allow the children to be open to the world.
